

A 13-page analysis of the police/CPS case against an entirely innocent man is available through this website. It shows that the police were guilty of misfeasance, nonfeasance and malfeasance in their handling of this case in spite of their avowed 'commitment' to maintaining the highest levels of honesty and integrity and to preventing corrupt, dishonest, unethical or unprofessional behaviour.

Following a tortuous succession of hearings: four appearances over a period of six months at Swindon Magistrates Court followed by two appearances (over three days) at Swindon Crown Court, this appalling, deliberate attempted miscarriage of justice was concluded in January 2020 by a finding of 'Not Guilty' by 'twelve good men and true' (actually eight women and four men).

In view of its sensitivity, the file can only be made available on request by email to the website author, Paul Turner at wirepuller@hotmail.com.